

How to get the job (or promotion) you really want

The opportunity to work in emergency services can be one of the most rewarding choices you make in your life. However, before you can enjoy being part of the team, you have to get hired! And that's not so easy these days. Because fire and EMS jobs are in high demand, employers can be more selective in their hiring practices. A successful interview can dramatically improve your chances of getting hired. Don't wait until the job you really want comes along to start preparing for your interview! Otherwise, you may find yourself receiving a rejection letter in the mail and being frustrated and angry because the job you really wanted... went to someone else.

This program will focus on:

- 5 things that make you stand out in a competitive job market
- 7 ways to prepare yourself for an interview
- Important oral and written skills you need to have
- 15 important tips to ensure a successful interview
- How to give interview answers that will make the panel say "wow!"
- What questions you should ask and what questions you should avoid.
- How... and when to follow-up.
- And so much more!

If you are serious about getting a job in emergency services, you cannot afford to miss a session packed with tips to set you apart from your competition.

This program was developed and is presented by:
Dr. Richard B. Gasaway